

Three questions facing the development of the school and the school library in the insight in the newest methods of learning and learning styles

We consider these three questions as essential in the development of the school and the school library. They are facing the demands for learning skills of the 21st century. The starting point is your own school or school library. Please reflect over the three challenges for you local school/school library.

During the course your reflections will be very important in interaction with the other participants in the Café-seminar.

- How can your school library/centre support that pupils have the possibility to develop their ability to search, develop and pass on information and knowledge?
- How can your school library/centre create a space of learning where pupils have access to many different religious, ethnic and cultural understandings and point of views?
- How can your school library/centre contribute to pupils becoming active producers of knowledge and not only consumers of information?

Gert Larsen
Danish coordinator